

Spouses fulfill a unique role in our Air Force, providing support for the military member who has answered the call to serve. Many spouses are in search of a career for financial reasons along with personal and professional fulfillment. As many families need two incomes to maintain their quality of life, spouse employment opportunities are increasingly crucial.

The Airman and Family Readiness Center is the 'one stop, career stop for spouses' and has employment assistance services to meet the challenges spouses face in training for and finding suitable positions in their chosen career fields.

“Not only are our employment services important for personal fulfillment but, in many cases, spouses are major contributors to the financial stability of the family.”

Ms. Lorraine Neuser, Deputy Chief of Airman and Family Readiness Policy
